CEO of Skyway House Re-Elected to CCAPP Board of Directors

CHICO, Calif., Sept. 29, 2015: Jennifer Carvalho, Chief Executive Officer for Skyway House, has been re-elected for a three-year term to represent Programs on the board of directors for the California Consortium of Addiction Programs and Professionals (CCAPP). The CCAPP is a statewide trade organization that represents addiction workers and agencies. It was created as a consolidation of the California Association of Addiction Recovery Resources (CAARR) and the California Association of Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Counselors (CAADAC).

As CEO of Skyway House, Carvalho has seen firsthand the damage that substance abuse can have on individuals’ lives. Since 1993, Skyway House has provided life-changing treatment to those who are battling addictions to drugs and alcohol. With options for care that include residential treatment, intensive outpatient treatment, and traditional outpatient services, Skyway House is recognized for the excellent care they provide and the number of lives that they have helped improve.

The CCAPP is the largest association of nonprofit and for-profit substance abuse treatment programs and addiction-focused treatment professionals in the state of California. These various programs and professionals provide services to over 100,000 people in residential, outpatient, and private practice settings throughout the state each year.

In 2014, Carvalho was elected to the CAARR board of directors. When the CAARR and the CAADAC joined to form the CCAPP, Carvalho was then invited to be on the inaugural CCAPP board. Carvalho served one year in that position and has now been elected to serve a full term.

“I am honored and humbled to have been elected to be on the board of directors of this wonderful organization,” said Jennifer Carvalho, CEO. “The work that they do and the professionals that they support have changed the lives of countless individuals, and I am so pleased to be a part of it.”

The annual CCAPP conference will be held Oct. 1-4 at the Burbank Marriott Hotel. Providing state and national legislative updates, networking opportunities, and cutting edge presentations, CCAPP’s Annual Conference promises to provide a wealth of information and opportunities for those in attendance.
